

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A burial urn for cremated remains which utilizes a housing which has an internal chamber which is adapted to connect with a plurality of containers. The exterior side edge of the housing is formed polygonal shaped and is divided into a series of separate panels with there being a name plaque mounted on each panel. A single container is to align with a particular name plaque. Each container includes a removable lid to gain access into the container. The housing is to be closed by a cover which provides access to the containers.